

The Mustache Monitor!

Volume 13 - Issue #1 - 2022

A Two Year Pandemic May Have Altered Judgement

by Whaddaf Huck

At this year's Selleck Sunday pre-party (if those words don't make sense, you need to raise more money), a strange phenomenon may have emerged.

Kids Can Philanthropy Director Cliff McEvoy took the mic first, and while he did speak at length about his charity that's been around for over a century, he also spoke about winning Nastiest Stache in an almost wishful manner.

Immediately following, The Child Saving Institute's Jaymes Sime took the mic and reminded all present that 1) CSI has been around for a century+infinity, and that he still hasn't shaved since winning Nastiest Stache over 2 years ago.

It's been said that M4K is often fueled by competition, but the "battle" for Nastiest doesn't usually begin until a few poor souls find themselves on stage with the chance to actually win something. Never before has a hat been throw in the ring before Clean Shave, and especially not at the feet of an all-time "great."

The Monitor staff be following this story not at all.

Mis-stached Connections

Momma Didn't Raise No Quitter

Hey, I've been waiting for an hour at the bar for you to return from the bathroom. Don't leave me hanging - I haven't explained the best part about curing bacon. Oh, and just wait until I tell you about the time I ate six pounds in five minutes at a four-way stop on third street next to two doppelgängers that shared a one bedroom dorm in college.

I've enjoyed our brief chat and wanna be honest with you. My mom taught me how to properly treat a lady so that she feels like a princess, which is why I plan on splitting the Uber cost later 50/50. If you play your cards right, I might even pick up the Taco Bell drive thru tab en route. Ignore my clean shaven face and imagine the majestic stache that will be there by our third date.

Finish up your business in there and let's get back to these Coors light tall boys while the mountains are blue, just like my ball...bag I take to the gym.

A Helpful Tip for your Mom

I'm a man that goes by many names. A supporter. A giver. A gentleman. A provider. A grower. A show-er. Most Testosterone 2015.

I'm looking to do

Sorry for all the redactions. This guy just loves a little too much

MYLF Seeking MILF

Reread the header. The name's Bill. Find me on Tinder ok.

Bill, 69

📍 less than a mile away

I'm a single attractive man looking for a woman to cook me supper. I ain't got time for no games because I work and only have time for hanky panky ok. The woman I chose must be fisisally fit too, because I am pretty much a clidesdale ok. I don't want kids so don't be asking me to make you a baby Karen. Macironi and cheese is my favorite food but not Kraft ok. Thanks. I have a Lebaron and Hall and Oats make good music.

NICK KNOWS

What advice would you give a grower thinking about starting a family?

Well, if the timing is right, a child can be a true blessing. BUT, if the timing's wrong- whew daddy... watch out! You DO NOT want to conceive between July-Sep. If you do that, you're either gonna have a very pregnant and moody lady or a crying baby on your hands during May.

Even worse, you might miss the delivery if she happens to pop it out on a Thursday or Stache Bash night. You can plant the seed anytime between Halloween and Father's Day if you know what I mean, but Valentine's day is the real sweet spot- and not 'cause of all the romanticism.

If you do it then, she'll be knocked up enough that she won't be able to drink and not too far along that she's sick and grumpy. And voilà, you got yourself a DD for the whole growing season.

What's the best way to prepare for a solid financial future?

Whenever you start a bar tab at a checkpoint, never use your real name. Some of those guys get a little cheeky and think it's funny to put a round of fireball or tallboys on someone else's tab and that can add up real quick- especially if you forget to close out. I personally like using Roy or Cornelius

Sweetest Stache Term Comes To End Just in the Nick of Time

by Steve M. F. Austin

The year was 2013. The 2nd iteration of The Sweetest Stache trophy was falling apart from such strenuous events as “being picked up” or “looked at funny”. Seeking to build a more long-lasting trophy befitting the honor, Mustache George merged metal, brawn, wood, lasers, and even dipped a live eagle in molten silver to forge The Magnum. A trophy that would never break. A trophy that would outlive us all. A trophy that scientists would study in hopes of finding the key to ever-lasting life. George let out a sigh of relief knowing that was one to-do list item that would never again need fixing.

Unfortunately, not even ten years later, The Magnum was picked up by Nick Phillips. At first, way up. Thirty-thousand feet up. The Magnum and spirits were literally sky high, until Nick sent it back to earth. Repeatedly. New cases be damned, The Magnum was dropped, thrown, flipped, and abused in ways never seen before. When asked why he showed such little care for The Magnum, Air Force Captain(or maybe Chaplain, we don't fact check) Nick replied, “You mean you don't have 3 more of these to rotate out and a warehouse full of massively over-priced parts? Wth is the Stache Tax good for then?”

The Monitor was also on scene when Mustache George received the box of parts that were once his masterpiece and received this statement. “He's a pilot right? Well he can take a flying-“

ASKY THE NASTY - INTERVIEW WITH STACHEY “WINNER” PAT WYMAN

Are brown eggs better than white eggs? Is chocolate milk better than white milk?

Don't ask dumb questions. Next.

I went Selleck in my first year, how do I avoid a sophomore slump?

Sophomore slumps don't exist. You show up and do the work. And by work, I obviously mean eat bacon, drink beer and annoy people relentlessly on social media until they donate.

How serious should I take menu warnings about raw and under-cooked meats?

Those warnings apply to mere mortals. You have a mustache, you can eat whatever you want as long as it's bacon.

Ketchup or mustard?

Bacon. Another dumb question. Next.

It's been almost a week and my stache isn't really there in any light.

What can I do?

Are you f-ing kidding me with this question? I've been growing for eight years and mine still isn't there. Go ask Nick P. . .

My boss has said no one is allowed to work from home on Fridays in May. Should I skip the checkpoints?

Does your boss even try to grow a mustache? No? Then tell him/her to shut up. You have a mustache now, you make the rules. You show up to those checkpoints and return to the office in mid-to-late June after the high of Stache Bash wears off.

I've entered BACON in Wordle almost 1900 times and I'm still 0-3xx. How does this stupid game work?

Any game that doesn't recognize bacon is stupid. Here's a game for you, consume a piece of bacon for every dollar donated.
